THINGS TO KNOW

SAM NEWHOUSE, REPORTER

Philly activist Jamal Johnson's "Stop Killing Us" protest is more ambitious than it appears. For the second year running, Johnson will march to Washington D.C. to demand legislative action to stop the killings of black men by police around the country, calling for supporters in the communities he walks through to join him. While Johnson knows the scale of what he's up against, he believes he can make a difference. Read more inside and on metrophilly.us.

TWENTY KILLED IN PLANE CRASH IN SWISS ALPS

All 20 people on board were killed when a small vintage plane crashed in the Swiss Alps, police said Sunday. Three Austrians and 17 Swiss were on board the trimotor JU-52 aircraft, built in the late 1930s as a military aircraft and later used to operate scenic and charter flights, when it crashed shortly before 5 p.m. Saturday on the west side of the Piz Segnas mountain in the canton of Grisons. The plane had been returning from Locarno near Switzerland's southern border. "Yesterday was the worst day in the 36-year history of JU-Air," airline Chief Executive Kurt Waldmeier said at a news conference Sunday. "We have all suffered a very great loss." Police said they were not aware of any distress call and had not yet determined the cause of the crash, which occurred hours after a family of four was killed when their small plane went down further west in the Alps. The investigation, complicated by the vintage plane's lack of a "black box" flight recorder, will take several days.

STEVEN SEAGAL IS OUR 'SPECIAL REP' TO US: RUSSIA

Russia's Foreign Ministry said Saturday it had made U.S. actor Steven Seagal its special representative for Russian-U.S. humanitarian ties, a role it said was meant to deepen cultural, art and youth ties between the two countries. President Vladimir Putin presented a Russian passport to Seagal in 2016, saying he hoped it would serve as a symbol of how fractious ties between Moscow and Washington were starting to improve. But since then, U.S.-Russia relations have only worsened, with U.S. intelligence agencies accusing Moscow of interfering in Donald Trump's White House run, an allegation Russia denies. The Russian Foreign Ministry likened Seagal's new role to that of a U.N. goodwill ambassador and said that the actor, who is known for his martial arts prowess, would receive no salary. "It's a case of people's diplomacy intersecting with traditional diplomacy," the ministry said. Seagal, who sometimes appears on Russian state TV to talk about his views and career, was cited by Kremlin-backed TV station RT as welcoming the appointment.

AT LEAST 82 KILLED BY 7.0 QUAKE ON INDONESIA'S LOMBOK, BALI ISLANDS

Indonesia's resort island of Lombok was hit by a magnitude 7.0 earthquake Sunday. The powerful quake triggered panic among tourists and residents, and was also felt on the neighboring holiday island of Bali. On Lombok, thousands fled their homes to seek safety in open spaces. Some 82 people were confirmed dead, many from northern and western parts of Lombok, according to Agung Pramaja, head of the Disaster Mitigation Agency in the West Nusa Tenggara province, which includes Lombok and neighboring islands but not Bali.

U.S. COURT ORDERS FULL RESTORATION OF DACA

A federal judge Friday ruled the Trump administration must fully restore the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program, which protects from deportation some young immigrants who were brought to the United States illegally as children, including accepting new applications for the program. U.S. District Judge John Bates in Washington said he would stay Friday's order, however, until Aug. 23 to give the administration time to decide whether to appeal. Bates first issued a ruling in April ordering the federal government to continue DACA, including taking applications. He stayed that ruling for 90 days to give the government time to better explain why the program should be ended. On Friday, Bates said he would not revise his previous ruling because the arguments of President Donald Trump's administration did not override his concerns. Under DACA, roughly 700,000 young adults, often referred to as "Dreamers", were protected from deportation and given work permits for two-year periods, after which they must reapply to the program.

VENEZUELA ARRESTS SIX OVER DRONE EXPLOSIONS

Venezuela's government said Sunday six people had been detained over drone explosions at an event attended by President Nicolas Maduro as his political opposition warned of a possible crackdown after he accused his adversaries of seeking to assassinate him. State TV Saturday showed the socialist leader appearing startled by what seemed to be an explosion while giving a speech in Caracas. One of the six suspects detained had a pending arrest warrant for a 2017 attack on a military base, and a second had been arrested in 2014 for participating in anti-government street protests, Interior Minister Nestor Reverol said. Opposition critics said the government has in the past used such incidents as a pretext for heavy-handed actions against critics, including jailing some of the country's best-known leaders. "We warn that the government is taking advantage of this incident ... to criminalize those who legitimately and democratically oppose it," wrote the Broad Front opposition coalition in a statement published on Twitter.

Have You Had A Hip Replacement?

Did You Know Some Stryker Brand Hips Have Been Recalled?

Stryker LFIT COCR V40 Femoral Head Recalls

The FDA issued a recall of the LFIT Anatomic COCR V40 Femoral Heads. The recall affected almost 45,000 devices. Stryker expanded the list. The company said the devices showed "higher than expected" complication rates.

Watch Out for the Following Symptoms:

- Pain with walking
- Swelling around groin or hip
- Lumps near hip replacement site
- Dislocation/feeling like joint has moved or slipped
- Popping or squeaking noises during movement

People can see no indication their hip implant is failing. It's important to know what hip replacement you have.

If you have an implant that the manufacturer has recalled but don't have these symptoms, ask your physician for a blood test to look for chromium or cobalt. Elevated levels of cobalt or chromium may indicate the hip implant is wearing down and will soon fail. These metals in the bloodstream can cause neurological issues or damage internal organs.

If you feel that you or a loved one have been injured as a result of hip replacement surgery wherein a Stryker LFIT COCR V40 Femoral Head implant was used, call us at (215) 569-1212 to explore whether you may have the right to recover full compensation for your injuries.

Black activist marches to DC with a single demand: 'Stop killing us'

Philadelphia-area man is marching to the Capitol to call attention to police killings of unarmed black people.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

Jamal Johnson, 61, a Philly native and former Marine, is spending August walking from New Jersey to Washington with one demand: "Stop killing us."

It is short and simple, and painfully necessary. As national attention shifts from one presidential scandal to the next, unarmed black and brown men are still dying at the hands of law enforcement.

Johnson walked from

Jamal Johnson kicked off his second "Stop Killing Us" march to DC in Vineland, New Jersey, on Aug. 4. SAM NEWHOUSE

Philly to D.C. in 2017 to deliver his demands to the Justice Department; this year, he'll be delivering them to the Congressional Black Caucus.

"Our demands are for policing standards ... that would hopefully minimize police brutality and the killing that exists in these communities right now," Johnson said Aug. 4, shortly after beginning his march in Vineland, New Jersey, at the site of the July 14 killing of Rashaun Washington.

Washington, 37, was fatally shot by police after he reportedly told them he had a bomb wrapped in a shirt. Cellphone video taken before the shooting shows Washington, shirtless and mumbling while standing a dozen feet away from officers with their guns out. After a 30-minute standoff, he rushed police and was fatally shot. NJ.com later reported that he had garden shears in the shirt. The shooting is under review by the New Jersey Cumberland County Prosecutor's Office.

"Maybe if they had someone there from crisis intervention, maybe a mental health therapist, they probably could have helped that young man instead of him getting shot," Johnson said.

"Same thing in Dorney Park," Johnson said, referring to the July 28 fatal shooting of Joseph Santos, 44, by South Whitehall Township Police. Cellphone video showed Santos acting erratically and climbing on the hood of a police car before approaching an officer with both hands out. The shooting is under review by Lehigh County prosecutors.

Another incident Johnson is marching for involves Antwon Rose, 17, who was fatally shot in the back by East Pittsburgh Police on June 17 while unarmed and running from law enforcement. The officer who shot him has since been fired and charged with murder.

Johnson would like to see national guidelines for law enforcement that address systemic injustices; among his ideas are abolishing "no-knock" searches, creating independent civilian review boards for every municipality and strict prosecution of excessive force.

Johnson knows achieving his goals won't be easy, or even likely.

"To me, success would be when all of us that feel this way about these killings all rise up and demand that something gets done. That's success," Johnson said. "Even if I'm out here by myself, that's still one person saying something. ... If one person sees me and says 'Huh, let me look into what this guy is talking about,' that makes it all worth it. No doubt."

Preteens who confessed to hanging black baby doll from noose at Bethel Burial Ground in Queen Village said they didn't know it was racist symbolism. WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

Preteen boys take responsibility for hanging black baby doll

A group of black and white kids confessed and said they were unaware of racist symbolism, just wanted to “creep people out.”

sam.newhouse@metro.us

A plastic black baby doll found hanging over the site of a recently rediscovered historic African-American graveyard was quickly denounced as a hate crime and even blamed on President Trump. But a group of preteen black and white boys has reportedly come forward to take responsibility for hanging the doll to scare people, authorities said Thursday.

inspired by the hateful rhetoric of our President.” The Fraternal Order of Police Lodge No. 5 offered a $5,000 reward for the arrest of the perpetrators.

But by the end of the day, the perpetrators stepped forward to claim responsibility. They were a group of black and white boys under age 13 who found the doll, thought it looked “scary,” and decided to hang it in the tree “to creep people out,” NBC10 reported.

NBC10 reporter Rosemary Connors was on-scene reporting on the incident, when, just after 6 p.m., four young boys approached her and admitted to hanging the doll.

The Rev. Mark Kelly Tyler, pastor of Mother Bethel AME Church, spoke to the boys personally, and said they told him they had discovered the doll — as well as the noose they used to hang it — nearby and decided to set it up to scare people.

Tyler said in a Facebook post the kids had no idea of the horrific symbolism of their action, nor of the U.S.’s monstrous history of lynchings of African-Americans. He also said he spoke to police, and they told him surveillance video corroborated the children’s story, though police did not comment on the case.

“These boys had a lot of heart to tell the truth. They found the doll and thought it was ‘creepy.’ So in typical boy fashion, they decided to creep people out with it,” Tyler said in a Facebook post. “Sadly, they had no idea of the ugly racial past of lynchings. They were remorseful as they understood better the way their act impacted so many. This is why we must ensure that our memorial to the ancestors buried here is one that also teaches children.”

“A heinous hate crime targeting the African-American community.”

Rue Landau, Philadelphia Commission on Human Relations Executive Director

City leaders denounced the action as a “hate crime” after the doll was discovered hanging from a tree in Weccacoe Playground in the Queen Village section of South Philadelphia, the site of a historic African-American cemetery.

Shortly after the doll was discovered, the Philadelphia Commission on Human Relations Executive Director Rue Landau called it “a heinous hate crime targeting the African-American community.” Mayor Jim Kenney said in a statement that the hanging of the doll “demonstrates how far this country has fallen when people are

A vintage, 1950-made Mountain View Diner was trucked to 133 Berkeley Street in the Wayne Junction area from Connecticut on Friday, set to open within a year. COURTESY OF PHILLY OFFICE RETAIL

Long-awaited Wayne Junction trolley car diner arrives in Philly

The vintage structure, set to open next year, is part of a $13 million retail and residential redevelopment of the area.

SAM NEWHOUSE
sam.newhouse@metro.us

Wayne's World is about to get more excellent.

A vintage trolley-car diner was delivered from Connecticut to a site near Wayne Junction, set to open by next spring.

"The old Wayne Junction diner was demolished in the early '90s," said Philly Office Group developer Ken Weinstein, who bought the diner and had it trucked to its new home at 133 Berkley St. Now he's looking for an operator who would like to turn it into a new neighborhood anchor.

"A lot of people fondly remember eating at the old Wayne Junction Diner, and we would like them to start new memories here at this Wayne Junction diner," Weinstein said.

The diner was a wide load on the road, and had a police escort from Broad and Cheltenham to its new home by SEPTA's Wayne Junction train station.

It was placed on the former site of the Van Straaten and Havey Silk Mill, next to the former Blaisdell Paper Pencil Co. at 137 Berkley St. The original Wayne Junction Diner was around the corner and was beloved by locals for decades. It closed in the '90s and sat vacant until it was razed in 2008.

"There's obviously a lot of nostalgia around the old Wayne Junction Diner, so we're excited to resurrect that idea and bring it back, 25 years later," Weinstein said.

Weinstein owns and operates the well-known Trolley Car Diner on Lincoln Drive, a 1952 Mountain View diner that was delivered by two helicopters and set down on Germantown Avenue near Cresheim Valley Parkway in 1999, opening in 2000.

"There's obviously a lot of nostalgia around the old Wayne Junction diner, so we're excited to resurrect that idea and bring it back, 25 years later."

Ken Weinstein

But the new diner, manufactured by the Mountain View Diners Company of Singac, New Jersey, in 1950, has been operated in Connecticut for some 68 years.

Weinstein said he wants the diner to hire locally and is encouraging neighbors interested in culinary work to look into Philabundance's free 14-week culinary-training program.

The diner still needs a foundation laid and a one-story addition to house a kitchen and bathrooms, but Weinstein said he wants it to open by next spring.

In 2017, Weinstein announced his plan for a $13 million redevelopment of residential and business units around the Wayne Junction SEPTA station on the border of Germantown and Nicetown, itself classified as a historic site.

Exploring Trump's Atlantic City

The Donald's thumbprint on the casino city is revealed in Levi Fox's museum and tours.

A.D. AMOROSI
letters@metro.us

Like it or not, one man who's left an indelible mark on Atlantic City is Donald Trump.

From his time operating Trump's World's Fair, to Harrah's at Trump Plaza (eventually becoming Trump Plaza before 1984's end) to Trump Taj Mahal, to Trump Castle, to Trump Marina Hotel

Casino (now, the Golden Nugget), he's been a part of AC's firmament nearly since gambling began there. "Atlantic City fueled a lot of growth for me," Trump told The New York Times in 2016. "The money I took out of there was incredible."

Along with bankrupting his casinos (yet earning big bucks), Trump reportedly screwed over countless contractors and subcontractors. He fought with Vera Coking over trying to use eminent domain to buy her South Columbia Place home-stand for limousine parking. Good times, right?

Skeletons aside, Trump also left behind some good bones. "This building not only had great bones, but its two towers — from hotel rooms to the way the arena's front opens onto the casino floor — was extraordinarily designed; a truly contemporary feel, even now," said President of Hard Rock AC Matt Harkness, who helped open the Taj in 1990, and bought it 2017 for his new gig.

One man who's captured the Trump zeitgeist is Levi Fox, with his Donald Trump Gambling Heritage Tour, and, as of Aug. 5, the Pop-Up Trump Museum in front of what used to be Trump Plaza.

As part of an ongoing historical and sociological study of all-things-Donald, Fox's "bipartisan, rather than nonpartisan" look at our president is seeking additional artifacts and stories about Trump and his casinos from anyone part of that go-go quarter-century (those who wish to donate can visit trump-museum.org). Along with the pop-up, Fox is seeking a permanent home or a regular space for his towering Trump totems.

"I was impressed by the number of people who were interested and receptive to the information, and to its ultimate goals," said Fox, in relation to last week's test run of the Trump Museum.

Having run his Trump tours since 2016, Fox got his start giving tours of AC attractions such as Lucy

Local historian Levi Fox holds a sign advertising his museum. PROVIDED the Elephant and candy factory tours at the James production facility.

When Trump ran for president in 2016, it was too good an opportunity to pass up. "Had he only chosen Chris Christie as his running mate, that tour would've written itself," he said.

Fox first tried to define a space for conversation and observation about the then-president-elect's Atlantic City era. "What we could learn from that time in AC would be important to the rest of the world now," said Fox.

Fox knew some would find a Trump Museum to be a shrine and others would see it as a slam palace. It is neither; Fox says that like all museums, it is history and documentation that comes before all: This is the story of casino Atlantic City, warts and all.

"That's why I made up a two-sided sign, where one says 'The Pop-Up Trump Museum' while the other says the 'Anti-Trump Museum.' Objects found in the museum are evidence in which to tell different stories. Some items are not flattering, especially considering that locals had negative interaction with Trump or the Trump Organization."

That Jersey Shore story — "small business owners who didn't get paid fully for work completed" as well as "those who remember that Trump moment positively, especially the 1990s" — takes the Trump story beyond the glitz others throughout the U.S. associate with the businessman-turned-television-star-turned-president: "My museum is a way of rebalancing the narrative."

Along with a tactile element to his museum ("in an era of fake news, the tangibility of permanent tags and stamps is crucial"), Fox has found so many of the objects in his exhibit — donated or purchased by Fox via eBay or auctions — were produced outside the country. Whether from Latin America, China or India, that gives his collection deeper context when considering the Trump's trade and tariff battles.

"That's useful for people to understand," said Fox. He recently found Trump hats made in Bangladesh, and unpacked a new exhibit: a Trump casino T-shirt made in El Salvador. "Where local history intersects with national policy is what makes the Pop Up Museum a living, breathing, interactive exhibition. Anything that gets to the heart of current issues, but allows us to use the material culture and the local history to shed light on — those objects matter to me. It's your history as much as Trump's."

Making Atlantic City great again

Here is a sampling some of the items at Levi Fox's Pop Up Trump Museum

- A bathrobe from the Trump Taj Mahal
- A purple Trump Marina duffie bag ("Handy for me to tote other museum items in") made in Sri Lanka
- A promotional camera from Trump Castle
- A Trump Taj canvas bag "proudly made in the U.S.A. by union labor... to be fair."
- A painting from a local woman that captures the vista of the Trump Castle and the Marina and other Trump architecture. "It's all in that one image. She actually tried to give it to Trump, but he wasn't there, they never heard back and she was disappointed. It is an honest local reflection on that era — an Atlantic City native's personal narrative."

Sudden new rules from the city requiring police approval before applying to host a block party have left many residents angry.

"This is totally unnecessary red tape that's just going to make it harder for neighbors to organize block parties, and weaken this important part of Philadelphia's culture," read a petition that has been sponsored by the bipartisan Philadelphia 3.0 political organization.

Like the laidback neighbor gatherings, the application process before the abrupt change was simple: Residents were required only to get approval from 75% of their neighbors, submit a form to the Streets Department and pay a $25 fee.

But on Thursday, city officials issued a press release announcing the policy without any notice, according to Philly Voice.

"[All] Street Event Applications handled by the Right of Way Unit will require prescreening approval from local Police Districts in advance of being processed."

The change applies to applications submitted for approval starting Aug. 1.

According to WHYY.org, "the change adds another half-page of bureaucracy to the application process, which can still be completed entirely online. (Applicants can submit peti-

"To better serve residents, the process has been revamped to allow the police to approve the request before the permit is paid for and issued," the spokeswoman stated.

She added that "approval by the police was always a part of the block party permitting process, that is nothing new. The only thing that has changed is the order in which it now happens."

While block parties happen all over, they are something of a tradition in Philly: A 2013 City Paper report showed Philly held more block parties than New York, D.C., Los Angeles, Chicago or Boston. According to WHYY.org, so far this year, the city has issued 3,166 block-party permits, and "another few hundred will likely be issued for the coming Labor Day weekend."

City Winery to open in Philadelphia's Fashion District

The wine and music venue operator will come to town in September 2019.

letters@metro.us

City Winery announced Thursday it will open a location in Philadelphia's Fashion District.

The New York company, which combines celebrations of wines and food has been eyeing Philadelphia (venues are also located in New York, Chicago, Nashville, Boston, Atlanta and Washington) for years, according to owner Michael Dorf.

City Winery will open in Center City's old Gallery mall. It will join more than a dozen new vendors in Philly's Fashion District — which runs from 8th Street to 11th Street and from Market Street to Filbert Street — as part of the city's expansion of the area.

"This is a great town for us and it's perfect for our network of venues," said Dorf.

"It really is perfect and this particular spot is great. We need column-free space. We need high ceilings, we need traffic, we like it when it's easy for people to get in and out and this facility is fantastic," added Dorf.

Aside from being a place to enjoy music, food and wine, City Winery also offers classes about food and winemaking, and hosts private events.

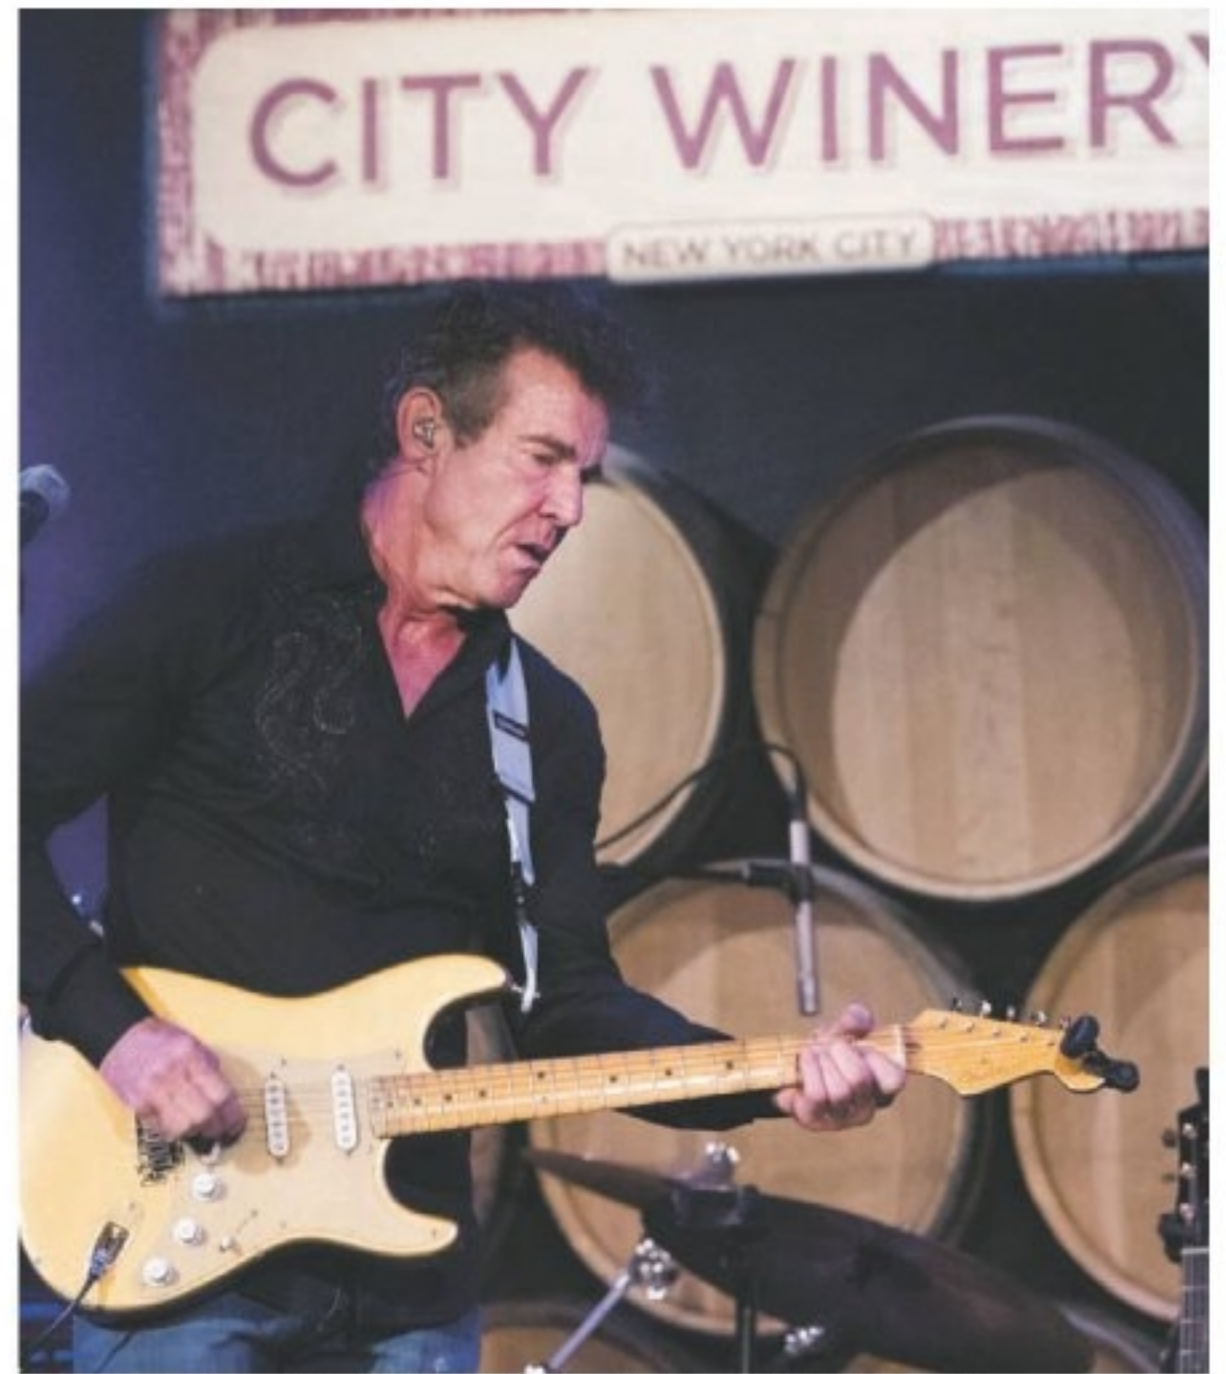

City Winery is slated to open in September

Trump says his son sought information on Clinton from Russians in 2016

President Donald Trump acknowledged Sunday that his son met with Russians in 2016 at Trump Tower to get information on his election opponent Hillary Clinton, saying it was "totally legal" and "done all the time in politics."

The Republican president had previously said the meeting was about the adoption of Russian children by Americans. Trump's morning Twitter post was his most direct statement on the purpose of the meeting, though his son and others have said it was to gather damaging information on the Democratic candidate.

In a tweet, Trump also denied reports in The Washington Post and CNN that he was concerned his eldest son, Donald Trump Jr., could be in legal trouble because of the meeting with the Russians, including a lawyer with Kremlin ties.

He repeated that he had not known about the meeting in advance.

"Fake News reporting, a complete fabrication, that I am concerned about the meeting my wonderful son, Donald, had in Trump Tower. This was a meeting to get information on an opponent, totally legal and done all the time in politics — and it went nowhere. I did not know about it!" Trump said.

Political campaigns routinely pursue opposition research on their opponents, but not with foreign representatives from a country viewed as an adversary. Russian officials were under U.S. sanctions at the time.

Special Counsel Robert Mueller is examining whether Trump campaign members coordinated with Russia to sway the White House race in his favor. Russian President Vladimir Putin has denied his government interfered.

One part of the inquiry has focused on a June 9, 2016 meeting at Trump Tower in New York between Donald Jr., other campaign aides and a group of Russians.

War on straws boosts global plastic-waste struggle

Companies in different countries are set to eradicate or at least reduce the use of disposable slurpers and stirrers. But are these measures enough to tackle the problem of pollution in the oceans?

DANIEL CASILLAS
letters@metro.us

Thousands of global campaigns to stop the use of single-use straws, which make up a large portion of plastic pollution of the Earth's oceans, have emerged.

But analysts warn this won't be enough to eradicate the problem. Some say replacing plastic with other materials could do even more harm.

The movement began after a 2015 video that went viral, which featured a sea turtle in Costa Rica "crying" as activists attempted to remove a straw from its nostril. The images were seen by more than 32 million YouTube users.

According to data by U.S. organizations, Americans alone throw away 500 million plastic is the year when plastic waste could outnumber fish in the world's oceans if they continue to be contaminated at the same level, according to the World Economic Forum.

straws a day, enough to circle the Earth twice. European Union countries, according to consulting firm Eunomia, consume around 23 billion straws a year.

"In the fight against plastic pollution, single-use straws are a critical starting point to drive meaningful impact and also to raise consumer awareness around ocean health," Dune Ives, Lonely Whale's executive director, told to Metro.

Lonely Whale last year launched "Strawless Ocean" consumer-awareness push. Many activists recognize that the fight against plastic contamination won't not be won by attacking the use of straws alone, but see this as a good start.

"There is no silver bullet to solving the ocean plastics problem. We all have a role to play," Nicholas Mallos, director of Ocean Conservancy's Trash Free Seas, stated. "Campaigns like skipping the straw or ban the bag are critical tools for reaching and educating the public on the problem of ocean trash and single-use plastics."

Alternatives to plastic straws

1 Drink straight

In many cases it is not really necessary to use a straw. Many can be consumed directly from the container: canned drinks, bottles or glasses.

2 Biodegradable straws

This type of straw is one of the most viable options for ending the contamination. Around the world, several projects produce straws made of bamboo and other plants that are more environmentally friendly and easily degradable.

3 Stainless steel

Straws made of stainless steel that can be reused countless times are becoming a trend in online stores because they represent a more eco-friendly option by generating less waste.

WHAT ARE THE FOOT-TRAFFIC RULES?

We've all done the sidewalk "two-step": You're walking on the sidewalk and someone is walking towards you and you both do the two-step to avoid walking into each other. I figure the rule of thumb, in the USA anyway, is to stay to the right just as you would if you were driving down the street. So when walking down the sidewalk if we all just stay to the right we could avoid the awkward two-step. The escalator is another issue. In Europe there are signs posted to be read while you're on the escalator "standing stay to the right and walking/passing on the left" or something like that. Some people like me walk up the escalator, although if I'm feeling particularly lazy I'll stand and enjoy the ride. But why make everyone behind me wait if they want to walk up the escalator by standing on the left side?

and the person had the nerve to yell at me to go to another pole. When did it become your pole when you lean on it? Also when someone says excuses me it does not mean to still lean on the pole, but move up or down an inch so someone can hold it. Look around you, get off your phone, and pay attention to your surroundings and just be considerate and stop leaning on the subway poles!

Back to the drawing board with Jennifer Yuh Nelson

The dystopian drama "The Darkest Minds" marks the actress' live-action debut.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

You might not know the name Jennifer Yuh Nelson, but you've definitely seen her work. Well, at least your children have. Not only was she a story artist for "Madagascar" and head of story for "Kung Fu Panda," but she also directed "Kung Fu Panda 2" and "Kung Fu Panda 3."

Having spent the bulk of her career in animation, the two-time Annie Award-winner soon set her sights on moving into live-action. The huge success of the "Kung Fu Panda" franchise meant that she was immediately in demand, too.

With Alexandra Bracken's young-adult novel "The Darkest Minds," which is set in a dystopian America where a pandemic has killed 98 percent of the children under 20 and the remaining 2 percent have developed mysterious psychic powers that lead to their internment, Nelson saw the perfect opportunity to mold her cinematic sensibilities with her ambition. We chatted with Nelson about her transition from animation to live-action movies.

How did you get involved with "The Darkest Minds"?

I was looking to go into live-action. This is my very first live-action film. I had read an early draft of the script. It had such a really great emotional core to it. It had a moment that I don't find in a lot of scripts, which is really hard to reverse engineer, it was that sort of gut punch where you want to cry and hug the ones you love. So it was that kind of moment and I thought it was a great movie to start with, a great scale of movie, with great characters, so that's why I jumped onto it.

What did you want to explore and achieve with live-action that you hadn't been able to do with animation?

I have always thought of live-action, even when I was dreaming up movies in my head as a kid, it was live-action that I was seeing. But animation was great training for me because as a storyboard artist in animation, you are able to storyboard everything. It is not just action, which they tend to do in live-action. But as a storyboard artist, you are part writer, part artist, part character development, basically you are coming up with the basic bones of the character and the film while drawing it. But that was really great. But the issue was that I just always had this image of a live-action movie in my head and I wanted to push the boundaries of the genre I was in, and push the boundaries of the age group I was aiming for.

supervisor. We could all get what we wanted. That sort of thing, people have said it is sometimes hard to know what a director wants because they have to read the tea leaves a little bit. If a director can whip out a piece of paper that says this is what we are going to get, it makes things a whole lot easier. It made for a relaxing shoot.

"The Darkest Minds" is now in theaters.

tion world into live-action?

One thing is that with animation you have to plan so far ahead. You can't just hope for the best and shoot whatever. You have to know what you want, because each frame is so expensive to get. I had a lot of planning before we got on set of "The Darkest Minds," because

What's in store for season four? ALL PHOTOS AMC

What to expect from 'Better Call Saul' season 4

AMC's popular "Breaking Bad" prequel may soon be venturing into familiar territory.

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

While Vince Gilligan's "Breaking Bad" remains one of the best television dramas of the past decade, the prequel series "Better Call Saul" is fast approaching its very own pedestal. That's because the spin-off all about how Jimmy McGill becomes Saul Goodman (Bob Odenkirk), the attorney for criminals who helped build Walter White's (Bryan Cranston) drug empire, is just as great.

On Monday, the fourth season for Gilligan and co-creator Peter Gould's show, which started six years before "Breaking Bad," finds the Jimmy mourning the death of his brother, Chuck McGill (Michael McKean), while struggling to find work as an unemployed and disgraced lawyer. There are still a few years left to go before he transforms into the man viewers first met in 2009, but judging by what we know about "Better Call Saul" season four, it will happen very soon.

"Better Call Saul" will finally enter the 'Breaking Bad' timeline. In a special issue of Entertainment Weekly commemorating the 10th anniversary of "Breaking Bad," Gilligan revealed that "Better Call Saul" season four will finally crossover with the other series' timeline. "I picture two giant circles moving together, converging into an ever-largening Venn diagram, and that Venn diagram represents the overlap," he said. "That area of overlap is getting larger and larger."

Gould added that they're "still a few years out from Walter White, but you'll see some things that will definitely ring a bell." This, Gilligan noted, will play out in "a subplot that very squarely gets into 'Breaking Bad' territory and brings us into the world – or at least points us on a path toward the world of Walter White." Specifically, the previously mentioned (but never before seen)

character Lalo (Tony Dalton) will flesh this out in season four.

But will we see Walter or Jesse?

As Gould previously warned, season four is "still a few years out from Walter White," but that doesn't mean the new season will totally avoid any and all reference to him or his eventual partner in crime, Jesse Pinkman (Aaron Paul). Fans have been hoping for a cameo by either character since "Better Call Saul" first premiered, and while the potential for such an occurrence has always been there, it has never been as strong as it is now.

Cranston visited the set while Gilligan and company were filming season three, setting off a flurry of rumors about White's arrival on the "Better Call Saul" scene. The actor was simply visiting, of course, but the co-creator took notice of the buzz. He told Entertainment Weekly that he "desperately" wanted to see Walter and Jesse in the show, as did everyone else. "Peter wants it, the writers do, the actors do," he added.

Jimmy will finally become Saul

A prediction whose outcome is all but guaranteed, however, is that season four will finally see McGill's first steps toward becoming Goodman. During a recent set visit, The Daily Beast noted an office storefront window with a sign that read, "SAUL GOODMAN, ATTORNEY AT LAW." When asked about it, Odenkirk carefully explained, "You are going to see a scene in Saul's office from the time period of 'Breaking Bad.'"

There are still a few years to go before the prequel series catches up to its predecessor, but judging by Odenkirk's explanation, the scene — and set — in question may stem from Gilligan's reveal that season four would flash-forward to the "Break Bad" timeline on occasion. So yes, it sounds like Jimmy will be stepping into Saul's shoes for a bit this time around.

Kim, however, may be on the way out

Aside from Saul's arrival, one of the most pressing questions viewers have had since season one is, "Who is Kim Wexler, and what's going to happen to her?" Jimmy's on-again-off-again partner, played by Rhea Seehorn, has been a pivotal force in Saul's life from day one. Yet she's nowhere to be found in "Breaking Bad." Kim is not even mentioned once. Obviously, she was a late addition to the prequel story, but the question remains.

Following season three's car accident and the death of Chuck, Kim is struggling to help Jimmy process his grief while landing on her own two feet. With the eventual end of "Better Call Saul," which AMC has already renewed for a fifth season, on the horizon, it's inevitable that she will finally leave him for good. That, or some aspect of the new, darker path Jimmy is about to take will lash out and remove Kim from the picture.

"Better Call Saul" season four premieres Monday, Aug. 6, at 9 p.m. on AMC.

Nick Williams bumps elbows with Rhys Hoskins after belting a home run against Miami. Both players have the Phillies riding high. GETTY IMAGES

Can Hoskins win NL MVP award?

The 25-year-old slugger is making a strong case.

JOVAN ALFORD
jovan.alford@metro.us

This season, the Philadelphia Phillies have been baseball's Cinderella story. For a team that hired an unproven manager in Gabe Kapler grouped with a multitude of young, talented players, the Phillies were not expected to be this good yet.

Instead, next season was suppose the time where everything came together to make a run at the NL East crown.

Throughout this season, the Phillies have received great starting pitcher led by ace Aaron Nola, who will be in the NL Cy Young conversation and timely hitting from players such as third baseman Maikel Franco, center fielder

Even though all three players are having fantastic seasons, Hoskins has the best shot at possibly winning the NL MVP.

It has been a long time since a Phillies player held the claim of being the best player in the National League.

The last time a Phillies player won the award was in the 2007 season, where shortstop Jimmy Rollins had a triple-slash line of .296/.344/.531 to go along with 30 home runs, 94 RBIs, and 41 stolen bases.

A year prior to Rollins' winning, former Phillies first baseman Ryan Howard held the title of NL MVP. The power-hitting slugger had a career-year with a triple-slash line of .313/.425/.659 with 58 home runs and 149 RBIs.

While he might not reach the numbers Howard posted in 2006, Hoskins could replicate what Rollins did. This season, the 25-year-old outfielder has a triple-slash line of .267/.378/.528 with 22 home runs and 72 RBIs. He also has a WAR of 1.2, which is not impressive but is also subjective.

Hoskins is having an impressive second season in the MLB and one of the main reasons why the Phillies are leading the NL East. But how do his numbers fare in comparison to the other players in contention for the NL MVP?

According to a recent MLB.com poll, the top three candidates for the National League are Atlanta Braves first baseman Freddie Freeman, Colorado Rockies third baseman Nolan Arenado, and Milwaukee Brewers center fielder Lorenzo Cain.

Freeman just like Hoskins is playing a major role in the Braves resurgence this season. The 28-year-old first baseman leads the National League in hits with 132 but has 18 home runs and 69 RBI.

He is also batting .317 with an OBP of .399, SLG of .529 and WAR of 4.7. Freeman definitely has Hoskins beat in average and WAR, but in terms of power numbers, the advantage goes to Hoskins.

However, Freeman is doing a better job with strikeouts as he only has 88 in 476 plate appearances, while Hoskins has racked up 105 strikeouts in 440 plate appearances.

Next up on the list is Arenado, who is keeping the Rockies in postseason contention. The power-hitting third baseman is tied for National League lead in home runs with 28. In 456 plate appearances this season, Arenado has a triple-slash line of .302/.386/.582, 80 RBIs and a WAR of 4.3. 27-year-old third baseman has better power numbers and fewer strikeouts (81) than both Freeman and Hoskins.

Hoskins has 72 RBIs on the season, the seventh most in the National League. He also has 22 home runs this year.

If he can get the Rockies to the postseason, it will be hard for Hoskins or Freeman to win the NL MVP.

Last but not least is Cain, who leads the National League in WAR with 5.4. The 32-year-old outfielder does not boast the power numbers that Arenado, Freeman, and Hoskins have but does everything else really well.

This season, Cain has a triple-slash line of .294/.390/.417 to go along with eight home runs and 30 RBIs. He's also racked up 105 hits, 19 stolen bases, and 18 doubles. This is not the first time that Cain has been in the running for MVP in his career.

Back in 2015 with the Kansas City Royals, he finished third in the American League MVP voting behind Mike Trout and winner Josh Donaldson.

With only two months to go in the regular season, it should be interesting to see how not only the pennant races but the award races shape up.

For all the potential MVP candidates, depending on how their respective teams finish, it will ultimately decide who will win the award.

In terms of Hoskins, if he keeps up the pace that he was on in June and July, where he combined for 15 home runs and 42 RBIs, then it will be hard not to consider him for the award.

Furthermore, if he does produce those types of numbers, best believe the Phillies will be playing in October.

The Celtics and Sixers are likely to square off on opening night of the 2018-19 NBA season. GETTY IMAGES

Sixers likely to open season against Boston

Celtics - Sixers again becoming a top NBA rivalry.

jovan.alford@metro.us

The official release of the 2018-19 NBA regular season schedule is still a few weeks away, but we might have an idea about who the Sixers will be playing on opening night.

Gary Washburn of the Boston Globe reported last week that the nationally-televised opening night games on TNT could be the Sixers taking on the Boston Celtics and the Oklahoma City Thunder facing the defending NBA champion Golden State Warriors.

If the rumor is true, this would be an exciting way to open up the 2018-19 season. For starters, having Russell Westbrook and Kevin Durant playing against each other, will always bring ratings because of the rivalry between the two superstars.

However, Sixers-Celtics is a historical rivalry and could be a potential preview of the Eastern Conference Finals.

Last season, the Sixers opened up the home portion of their schedule against the Celtics. The Celtics beat the Sixers that night, 102-92.

These two teams also played each other in London, England, later in the season, which turned out to be a good game. Boston came back in the game to beat Philadelphia once again.

But if you did not get enough of the rivalry, the two teams met up last year in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Even though the Celtics won the series in five games, there was no love lost between the two teams. The Sixers had ample opportunities to change the outcome of the series, but could not prevail.

Furthermore, both teams have great, young, talented players in Kyrie Irving, Jayson Tatum, Jaylen Brown, Ben Simmons, Joel Embiid, and Markelle Fultz, who all have the ability to take over games.

With LeBron James now playing in the Western Conference with the Los Angeles Lakers, the Eastern Conference is wide open for the taking.

The Celtics, Sixers, Toronto Raptors, along with the other East play-off contenders will all have a chance to claim the top spot.

Locals at NBA G-League Player Invitational

The Big 5 will be heavily represented in Chicago.

JOVAN ALFORD
jovan.alford@metro.us

Former La Salle Explorers forward B.J. Johnson, former Temple Owls forward Obi Enechionya and former St. Joseph's guard James Demery will all be participating in the NBA G-League Player Invitational on Sunday, Aug. 12 in Chicago, Illinois.

The G-League made the announcement on Friday about the prospective players who received an invite.

For those who may be unfamiliar about the G-League's Player Invitational, it is an opportunity for players to showcase their talents and skills in front of NBA G-League coaches, scouts, and player personnel with the hopes of earning either an NBA training camp invite or becoming eligible for the G-League draft.

Johnson, Enechionya, and Demery could all excel in the NBA G-League next season if they put on a good show in Chicago later this week.

Out of three former Big 5 talents, Johnson and Enechionya possibly have an inside track to earning an invite or playing in the G-League.

In terms of B.J. Johnson, the former La Salle standout spent the summer league with the Charlotte Hornets. In four summer league games, Johnson only averaged 5.5 points and 2.8 rebounds in 11.0 minutes per game.

However, despite the limited action he saw out in Las Vegas, Johnson had an outstanding final two seasons at La Salle, putting himself on the map as a pro prospect.

The former Syracuse University transfer excelled his senior year averaging a career-high 20.8 points, 8.3 rebounds, and 1.3 steals in 35.2 minutes per game.

Johnson also shot 44.6 percent from the field and 35.9 percent from three-point range on 4.8 attempts per game. The 6-foot-7 forward reportedly worked out for five teams during the draft process, so it is clear that the NBA interest is there.

Just like Johnson, Enechionya also got some time to showcase his talents in the summer league. The former Temple Owl forward played with the Detroit Pistons.

In six games with Detroit, Enechionya only averaged 3.2 points and 2.0 rebounds in 10.8 minutes per game.

Over his four-year career at Temple, the 6-foot-9 forward proved to be a consistent offensive option for head coach Fran Dunphy.

Finally, there is Demery, who did not participate in the NBA's summer circuit but had a solid college career at St. Joseph's. The Charlotte, North Carolina native got better each season on Hawk Hill and it culminated in an impressive senior season.

Demery can get out in transition and has the athleticism to drive to the basket with ease. With the way that he plays, Demery would be a great fit in the NBA G-League. He could also use the opportunity to work on his three-point shot.

With the Viagra Patent About to Expire, a New Sex Pill Takes the Spotlight

A patented pill costing less than $1 a dose stands to help millions of men with failing sex lives; no prescription will be required

By Ray Wilson
Associated Health Press

AHP— A new sex pill is set to take the spotlight with the Viagra patent about to expire. But unlike the former, it won't require a prescription and is priced just under a $1 a dose.

The new pill called Vesele is part of a new class of performance enhancers for men, which work instantaneously on the body and mind triggering arousal and firmer, harder erections.

Formulated with a special compound known as an "accelerator", Vesele can transport its active ingredients faster and more efficiently into the blood stream, where it begins to work its magic.

The patented ingredient blend initiates a process known as vasodilation, which causes arteries and vessels throughout the body to expand. This allows blood to flow directly to penis and genitals, resulting in harder erections which last longer. Cialis and Viagra are based around a similar concept.

But what makes Vesele so remarkable, and what these other sex pills can't do, is that also directs a small portion of this blood flow to the brain, which creates feelings of intense arousal. In laymen's terms, users become incredibly excited and turned on.

This is why the makers of Vesele say their pill has worked so effectively in clinical trials. It stimulates the two most important organs for great sex, the penis and the brain.

The Brain Erection Connection

Until now, medical researchers did not fully understand the brain-erection connection. It has now been made clear with Vesele. When both are supplied with a constant blood flow, men are harder and firmer for longer...and have unbelievable sex drives.

"Most of the research and treatment methods for men's sexual failures have focused on physiological factors and have neglected the emotional ones. For the leading sex drugs to work, like Cialis and Viagra, you need visual stimulation" explains Dr. Henry Esber, the creator of Vesele.

"And although they work for some men, the majority experience absolutely no fulfillment during sex.

According to research published by the National Institute of Health, 50% of men taking these drugs stop responding or can't tolerate their side effects...and on top of that they spend $50 per pill and it doesn't even work half the time.

This is what makes Vesele so different and effective. It floods the blood stream with key ingredients which cause arteries all over the body to expand. The patented accelerator speeds up this process even more.

The result is a rush of blood flow to the penis and brain, helping to create an impressive erection and a surging desire for sex. Often, this is all men need to get going. And when taken regularly, many men say they are energized and aroused all day."

Great Sex At Any Age

With the conclusion of their latest human clinical use survey trial, Dr. Esber and his team are now offering Vesele in the US. And regardless of the market, its sales are exploding.

Men across the country are eager to get their hands on the new pill and according to the research, they should be.

In the trial above, as compared to baseline, men taking Vesele saw a staggering 85% improvement in erection hardness over a four-month period. Their erections also lasted twice as long.

These same men also experienced an astounding 82% increase in the desire for sex (libido/sex drive) and an even greater improvement in overall satisfaction and ability to satisfy their partners.

Many men taking Vesele described feeling horny and aroused through the day. The anticipation before sex was amazing. They were also easily turned on. Their moods were more upbeat and positive, too.

Faster Absorption into the Blood Stream

Vesele is made up of three specialized ingredients: two clinical strength vasodilators and a patented absorption enhancer often called an accelerator. According to an enormous amount of clinical data, each is very safe.

Research shows that with age, many men lose their desire and interest in sex. They also struggle to produce an erection firm enough for penetration.

And although there are many theories as to why this happens (including a loss in testosterone) one thing is certain, inadequate blood flow is virtually always to blame. That's why sex drug manufacturers focus on blood flow, it makes your erection hard.

But what's more surprising, and what these manufacturers have failed to consider, is that lack of blood flow can also kill your sex drive. That's because blood supplies energy for the brain. This energy is required for creating brainwaves that cause excitability and arousal.

Studies show the Vesele stimulates the entire cardiovascular system, including the arteries that lead to both the brain and penis. The extreme concentration of the ingredients combined with the accelerator ensures that this process starts quickly.

Expiring Patent Opens the Door to a New Sex Pill: Vesele is a new pill that cost just $1 a dose does not require a prescription. It works on both body and mind to increase arousal and erection hardness.

The sexual benefits of Vesele are also multiplied as its ingredients build up in the system over time. This is why many men take it every single day.

Recent Studies Show Positive Effects on Women

In the same study referenced throughout, Vesele was also shown to have an amazing (and somewhat surprising) effect on women too. That's because the same arteries and vessels that carry blood and oxygen to the brain and genitals are the same in men and women.

"In our most recent study, women taking Vesele saw a stunning 52% improvement in arousal and sex drive. Perhaps more impressive, they also experienced a 57% improvement in lubrication.

You can imagine why some couples are taking Vesele together. Everything feels better. Everything works better. Everyone performs better. It's truly amazing."

A New Frontier of Non-Prescription Sex Pills

With daily use, Vesele is helping men (and women) restore failing sex lives and overcome sexual letdowns without side effect or expense.

Through a patented absorption enhancer, the Vesele formula hits the bloodstream quickly, resulting in phenomenal improvements in erection firmness and hardness. By boosting blood flow to the brain, users also experience sexual urges and arousal they often haven't felt in years.

Where to Find Vesele

This is the official release of Vesele in Pennsylvania. As such, the company is offering a special discounted supply to anyone who calls within the next 48 hours.

A special hotline number and discounted pricing has been created for all Pennsylvania residents. Discounts will be available starting today at 6:00AM and will automatically be applied to all callers.

Your Toll-Free Hotline number is 1-800-325-3302 and will only be open for the next 48 hours. Only a limited discounted supply of Vesele is currently available in your region.
